

1 Attributes and Behaviors of an Ideal Employee

Companies will only hire people who add business value to the corporation. Companies want to

1. grow the enterprise
2. make it more productive and profitable
3. make it more nimble and flexible
4. make it more attuned to their customers needs

Companies are looking for

1. An action oriented employee - employees who take action and take chances. Stagnant employees won't make your company money.
2. An intelligent employee - intelligence is a strong foundation for success.
3. An ambitious employee - employees can only help your company if they want to help themselves have a better career.
4. An autonomous employee - employees should be able to get the job done without extensive hand-holding.
5. An employee who displays leadership
6. An employee with a good cultural fit - Are you going to enjoy working with this individual on a daily basis?
7. An upbeat employee - Employees should be energetic and positive.
8. A confident employee - Confidence produces results and encourages employees to take on challenges that others shy away from.
9. A successful employee - previous success translates to future success
10. An honest employee - A talented but dishonest employee will add no value to the business
11. A detailed oriented employee - businesses want employees who will dot the "i"s and cross the "t"s
12. A modest employee - The most valuable employees show their value through their work rather than words.
13. A hard working employee - nothing great is accomplished easily.

14. A marketable employee - an employee that is presentable to clients.
15. A passionate employee